

Delcath Systems Names Michael D. Dellario as Vice President, Global Marketing

March 1, 2010

NEW YORK, March 1 -- Delcath Systems, Inc. (Nasdaq: DCTH), a medical technology company testing its proprietary treatment method for primary and metastatic cancers to the liver, announced today that it has named Michael D. Dellario, 57, to the newly-created position of Vice President, Global Marketing, effective today. Mr. Dellario will report to Agustin Gago, EVP, Global Sales and Marketing.

"The new position of Vice President, Global Marketing is a critical component as we build our domestic and international commercialization team in anticipation of FDA approval and CE designation for the Delcath PHP System™," said Mr. Gago. "Michael's record of success in bringing innovative medical products to worldwide markets gives us confidence that he will have a significant impact on the commercialization of the Delcath PHP System as we continue to implement our plans in key European and Asian markets."

Mr. Dellario was most recently a marketing consultant for startup medical companies in the early stages of marketing development, providing marketing strategies and commercialization support. Prior to that, Mr. Dellario was Managing Director, Asian Operations at E-Z-EM/Bracco Inc., a medical equipment and software, devices and diagnostic pharmaceuticals company, from 2006 to 2008. There, he designed a focused marketing program and channel distribution plan that grew Asian business by 78%. Before that, he was Vice President of Marketing at Ekos Corp., Inc., an interventional devices and equipment startup focusing on therapeutic ultrasound.

From 1992 to 2005, Mr. Dellario held several marketing positions at AngioDynamics, Inc. Prior to that, he held sales and marketing positions for medical technology companies. Mr. Dellario received his MBA from Lidenwood University and his BS from St. Louis University, both in St. Louis, Missouri.
