If a condition to the Exchange Offer is not satisfied but the Company determines to proceed with the Exchange Offer, such determination will constitute a waiver by the Company of such condition.

The section in the Offer to Exchange captioned "FEDERAL INCOME TAX CONSEQUENCES OF THE EXCHANGE OFFER" is hereby amended to read in its entirety as follows:

FEDERAL INCOME TAX CONSEQUENCES OF THE EXCHANGE OFFER

The following is a summary of the material U.S. federal income tax consequences relating to:

- o the exchange of 2000 Warrants for Exchange Warrants; and
- o the ownership, disposition, redemption and expiration of the Exchange Warrants.

This summary is based on provisions of the U.S. Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended (the "Code"), Treasury regulations promulgated under the Code, and administrative rulings, and judicial interpretations of the Code, all as in effect on the date of the Exchange Offer and all of which are subject to change, possibly retroactively. This summary is limited to U.S. Holders (as defined below) that are entitled to exchange 2000 Warrants for the Exchange Warrants pursuant to the Exchange Offer. This summary does not address all aspects of U.S. federal income taxation that may be important to you in light of your individual circumstances, such as, for example, if you are an investor subject to special tax rules (e.g., if you are a bank, thrift, real estate investment trust, regulated investment company, insurance company, dealer in securities or currencies, a person who acquired the 2000 Warrants as compensation, an expatriate or a tax-exempt investor) or if you would hold the 2000 Warrant or Exchange Warrant or would hold a share of Common Stock acquired as a result of an exercise of the Exchange Warrant as a position in a "straddle," as part of a "synthetic security" or "hedge," as part of a "conversion transaction" or other integrated investment, or as other than a capital asset. In addition, this summary does not address any aspect of state, local or foreign taxation.

For purposes of this summary, a "U.S. Holder" means a beneficial owner of the 2000 Warrants or Exchange Warrants or shares of Common Stock received upon exercise of Exchange Warrants, as the case may be, who is the owner of record thereof and is for U.S. federal income tax purposes:

- o an individual who is a citizen or resident of the United States;

- o a corporation, or other entity taxable as a corporation that is created or organized in the United States or under the laws of the United States or any state thereof (including the District of Columbia);
- o an estate the income of which is includible in gross income for U.S. federal income tax purposes regardless of its source; or
- o a trust if a court within the United States is able to exercise primary supervision over the administration of such trust and one or more United States persons have the authority to control all substantial decisions of such trust.

If a partnership (including any entity treated as a partnership for U.S. federal income tax purposes) holds the 2000 Warrants or Exchange Warrants, the U.S. federal income tax treatment of a partner in such partnership will generally depend upon the status of the partner and the activities of the partnership.

No ruling has been sought from the United States Internal Revenue Service (the "IRS") with respect to any of the tax consequences discussed below. The IRS could challenge some or all of the tax consequences described below or a court could sustain such a challenge.

Because the tax characterization and treatment of the exchange of 2000 Warrants for Exchange Warrants is unclear, you are urged to consult with your own tax advisor regarding how you should characterize and treat the exchange of 2000 Warrants for Exchange Warrants under federal tax laws applicable to you. You are advised to consult with your own tax advisor regarding the particular tax consequences to you of the offer to exchange 2000 Warrants for Exchange Warrants and the ownership, disposition, redemption and expiration of the Exchange Warrants in light of your particular tax situation and under state, local and foreign tax laws applicable to you.

Exchange of 2000 Warrants for Exchange Warrants

The tax treatment of a U.S. Holder's exchange of a 2000 Warrant for an Exchange Warrant is unclear. Although amendments to the Code and regulations promulgated under the Code now allow warrants to be exchanged tax-free in connection with corporate reorganizations, there has been no court decision, IRS regulation or other authoritative interpretation or guidance issued on whether an exchange of warrants may qualify as a tax-free reorganization known as a recapitalization. Generally, a recapitalization is a reshuffling of a capital structure within the framework of an existing corporation. Based upon informal conversations with IRS representatives, it appears likely the IRS would take the position that an exchange of warrants does not qualify as a tax-free reorganization known as a recapitalization because the exchange lacks the requisite concurrent transfer, exchange, or issuance of equity in the Corporation. Furthermore, even if the exchange of warrants could qualify as a tax-free reorganization, the exchange would be tax-free only to the extent the value of the warrant received does not exceed the value of the warrant surrendered. The tax consequences of the receipt of the excess value would depend upon whether it is received for services rendered, property exchanged, as a distribution to a person in the person's capacity as a shareholder, or for some other reason.

Based upon informal conversations with IRS representatives, it appears likely the IRS would take the position that an exchange of warrants is a taxable event for federal income tax purposes. However, if the IRS were to take this position, it is not certain the IRS would prevail. Under the Code and regulations promulgated under the Code, the exchange of warrants is now treated like the exchange of securities for purposes of the corporate reorganization provisions and case law has held that the exchange of securities in the nature of debt may qualify as a tax-free reorganization known as a recapitalization.

The exchange could be treated as a tax-free recapitalization to the extent the fair market value of the Exchange Warrant does not exceed the fair market value of the 2000 Warrant (the "Equivalent Value"). To the extent the fair market value of the Exchange Warrant exceeds the 2000 Warrant (the "Excess Value"), the Excess Value could be treated as if it were exchanged for a portion of the 2000 Warrant that has no fair market value in a tax-free or taxable exchange, or, if the U.S. Holder of a 2000 Warrant is a shareholder of the Company, as if it were distributed to the shareholder. Alternatively, the entire exchange could be treated as a taxable sale or exchange. There may be other characterizations of the exchange that the IRS could assert.

If the exchange of the Equivalent Value portion of the Exchange Warrant for the 2000 Warrant is treated as a tax-free recapitalization, the U.S. Holder will not recognize taxable income for U.S. federal income tax purposes as a result of such exchange; the tax basis of the U.S. Holder in the Equivalent Value portion of the Exchange Warrant will be the same as the U.S. Holder's tax basis in the 2000 Warrant that is allocated to the Equivalent Value portion of the Exchange Warrant; and the holding period of the U.S. Holder in the Equivalent Value portion of the Exchange Warrant will include the holding period of the U.S. Holder in the 2000 Warrant. The tax basis of the U.S. Holder in the 2000 Warrant that is allocated to the Equivalent Value portion of the Exchange Warrant will be the portion of the U.S. Holder's tax basis that is equal to the percentage that the Equivalent Value is of the fair market value of the Exchange Warrant.

If the exchange of the Equivalent Value portion of the Exchange Warrant for the 2000 Warrant is treated as a tax-free recapitalization, and the Excess Value portion of the Exchange Warrant is treated as if it were exchanged for a portion of the 2000 Warrant that has no fair market value, the exchange attributable to the Excess Value may not be considered a part of the tax-free recapitalization, but could be considered part of the plan of reorganization. In that event, the U.S. Holder will not recognize taxable income for U.S. federal income tax purposes as a result of the exchange attributable to the Excess Value portion of the Exchange Warrant; the tax basis of the U.S. Holder in the Excess Value portion of the Exchange Warrant will be the same as the U.S. Holder's tax basis in the 2000 Warrant that is allocated to the Excess Value portion of the Exchange Warrant; and the holding period of the U.S. Holder in the Excess Value portion of the Exchange Warrant will include the holding period of the U.S. Holder in the 2000 Warrant. The tax basis of the U.S. Holder in the 2000 Warrant that is allocated to the Excess Value portion of the Exchange Warrant will be the portion of the U.S. Holder's tax basis that is equal to the percentage that the Excess Value is of the fair market value of the Exchange Warrant (hereinafter called the "Basis in the 2000 Warrant Allocated to the Excess Value").

If the exchange of the Equivalent Value portion of the Exchange Warrant for the 2000 Warrant is treated as a tax-free recapitalization, and the Excess Value portion of the Exchange Warrant is treated as if it were exchanged for a portion of the 2000 Warrant that has no fair market value, the exchange attributable to the Excess Value portion of the Exchange Warrant may not be considered a part of the tax-free recapitalization or the plan of reorganization. In that event, the exchange attributable to the Excess Value portion of the Exchange Warrant will be a taxable event for U.S. federal income tax purposes; the U.S. Holder will have capital gain or loss in an amount equal to the difference between the Excess Value and Basis in the 2000 Warrant Allocated to the Excess Value; the capital gain or loss will be long term if the U.S. Holder's holding period in the 2000 Warrant exceeds one year at the time of the exchange; and the holding period of the U.S. Holder in the Excess Value portion of the Exchange Warrant will begin on the day after the taxable exchange.

If the exchange of the Equivalent Value portion of the Exchange Warrant for the 2000 Warrant is treated as a tax-free recapitalization and the U.S. Holder of the 2000 Warrant is a shareholder of the Company, then the Excess Value portion of the Exchange Warrant could be treated as if it were distributed to the U.S. Holder that is a shareholder of the Company. In that event, the amount of the distribution will not be includible in the U.S. Holder's gross income for U.S. federal income tax purposes; the U.S. Holder's tax basis in the stock of the Company will be allocated between the U.S. Holder's stock and the Excess Value portion of the Exchange Warrant in proportion to their fair market values on the date of distribution, except that the tax basis in the Excess Value portion of the Exchange Warrant will be zero if the Excess Value is less than 15% of the fair market value of the stock in respect of which it is issued; and the U.S. Holder's holding period in the Excess Value portion of the Exchange Warrant will include the U.S. Holder's holding period in the stock. However, under certain circumstances the distribution of the Excess Value portion of the Exchange Warrant to the U.S. Holder that is a shareholder of the Company will be treated as a distribution of property (with a fair market value equal to the Excess Value) to which Code Section 301 applies. For example, the distribution of the Excess Value portion of the Exchange Warrant to the U.S. Holder that is a shareholder of the Company will be treated as a distribution of property to which Code Section 301 applies if the distribution (or series of distributions of which such distribution is one) has the result of an increase in the proportionate interest of the U.S. Holder in the assets or earnings and profits of the Company and the receipt by another shareholder (or holder of a warrant) of money or property in a distribution subject to Code Section 301 or 356(a)(2) (generally, a distribution of cash or property made by the Company to a shareholder with respect to stock, or cash or property received in otherwise tax-free exchanges that have the effect of a dividend), even if the receipt of the Excess Value portion of the Exchange Warrant on the one hand, and cash or property on the other hand, are unrelated, independent, not part of a plan, or separated by up to 36 months (and possibly longer if part of a plan). Because there are no current or accumulated earnings and profits of the Company, if the distribution of the Excess Value portion of the Exchange Warrant is treated as a distribution of property to which Code Section 301 applies, the U.S. Holder will have a return of the U.S. Holder's tax basis in the stock of the Company to the extent of the Excess Value; capital gain (that will be long-term capital gain if the U.S. Holder has held the stock for more than one year) to the extent the Excess Value exceeds the U.S. Holder's tax basis in the stock of the Company; a tax basis in the Excess Value portion of the Exchange Warrant that is equal to the Excess Value; and a holding period in the Excess Value portion of the Exchange Warrant that commences on the day after the distribution.

Alternatively, the exchange of the 2000 Warrant for the Exchange Warrant could be treated as a taxable event for U.S. federal income tax purposes. In that event, the U.S. Holder will recognize taxable gain or loss for U.S. federal income tax purposes; such taxable gain or loss will be equal to the difference between the fair market value of the Exchange Warrant on the date of the exchange of the Exchange Warrant and the U.S. Holder's tax basis in its 2000 Warrant; the U.S. Holder's tax basis in the Exchange Warrant will be equal to the fair market value of the Exchange Warrant on the date of the exchange; and the U.S. Holder's holding period in the Exchange Warrant will commence on the day after the exchange. Any gain or loss recognized by the U.S. Holder generally will be long-term capital gain or loss if the U.S. Holder has held the 2000 Warrant for more than one year. The deductibility of capital losses is subject to limitations.

Ownership, disposition, redemption and expiration of Exchange Warrants

The U.S. Holder generally will recognize gain or loss on the sale, exchange or redemption of an Exchange Warrant, measured by the difference between the amount realized from the sale, exchange or redemption of the Exchange Warrant, and the tax basis of the Exchange Warrant. Any gain or loss generally will be capital gain or loss and will be long-term if the U.S. Holder's holding period of the Exchange Warrant exceeds one year at the time of the sale or exchange.

The U.S. Holder generally will not recognize taxable income on receipt of shares of Common Stock upon the exercise of the Exchange Warrants, except to the extent cash is received in lieu of a fractional share of Common Stock. Such U.S. Holder's tax basis in the shares of Common Stock so acquired will be equal to the sum of the tax basis and exercise price of the Exchange Warrants so exercised, less the portion of such tax basis, if any, allocable to any fractional share of Common Stock for which cash is received. The holding period of a share of Common Stock so acquired generally will begin with the date on which the Exchange Warrant is exercised.

Any U.S. Holder who receives cash in lieu of acquiring a fractional share of Common Stock upon the exercise of the Exchange Warrants generally will recognize gain or loss in an amount equal to the difference between the amount of cash received and the U.S. Holder's allocable tax basis in the fractional interest for which cash was received. Any gain or loss generally will be capital gain or loss and will be long-term if the U.S. Holder's holding period in the Exchange Warrant exceeds one year at the time of the receipt of cash.

If the U.S. Holder's Exchange Warrants have not been previously redeemed and expire in accordance with their terms without payment, the U.S. Holder will recognize a loss equal to the amount of the tax basis of the Exchange Warrants. Such expiration will be deemed a sale or exchange as of the expiration date and the loss, if any, will be a capital loss. Such capital loss will be a long-term capital loss if the U.S. Holder's holding period in the Exchange Warrant or exceeds one year at the time of expiration.

Adjustments to the Exercise Price

Some adjustments to the exercise price of the Exchange Warrants may result in a deemed distribution taxable to U.S. Holders of Exchange Warrants if the adjustments have the effect of increasing the U.S. Holder's proportionate interest in the earnings and profits or assets of the Company.
